Griffith College is an equal opportunities employer

All candidates applying for teaching posts must undergo a mock lecture before being interviewed; they may be asked demonstrate ability via portfolio.

Required Qualifications

Candidates are expected to have:

A bachelor degree in a design-related discipline. A postgraduate qualification (level 9 or above), or equivalent in a cognate discipline. Membership of a Professional body and any record of research, scholarship and publications are an advantage.

Successful applicants should have the following attributes:

- Proven teaching excellence and ability to support curriculum development.
- Demonstrated leadership and problem solving skills; apply logical processes, have excellent communication skills with knowledge and passion to enthuse, nurture creativity and motivate students to achieve success.
- Have expertise in freehand fashion drawing, illustration and life drawing, composition and presentation techniques using tools from graphics, fine art and digital design. Digital design skills are an advantage but not compulsory.
- A knowledge and scope and context of fashion illustrators' practice historically.
- Demonstrate a specialised knowledge of fashion illustration genres.
- A portfolio that demonstrates, a variety of creative fashion illustration and life drawing.
- Up to date with current and emerging fashion industry practice and innovative teaching mythologies.
- Self-motivation, strong organisational and excellent computer skills to undertake associated administrative tasks required and classroom management.
- Experience of working in a positive, flexible manner.
- A willingness to arrange and participate in student trips and site visits.
- Experience of openly exchanging information and supporting colleagues
- An understanding and commitment to Equal Opportunities and Diversity.

Guidelines for Mock Lecture

As part of the interview process, candidates are required to give a 5 – 10 minute mock lecture, regarding the interview panel as students.

The lecture should cover an item (or items) of the candidate's choice from an existing (or proposed) course offered by the Faculty or Department.

The candidate is free to use whatever medium and teaching aids are appropriate, including laptop and projector, but is encouraged to use new technology.

The lecture should not be the first lecture in a course, nor should it be an overview of a course.

The lecture will focus on explaining a particular aspect of the course to students who are unfamiliar with the topic.

The lecturer should begin by outlining any previous information that the students are expected to know (e.g. "I'm assuming you know how to which we covered last week").

Questions will be asked of the lecturer, either during or after the lecture.
