

Job Title: Learning Technologist	Reports to: Head of Digital Learning Department
Location: Dublin South	Job Type: Part-time 10-month Contract

Job Summary:

Griffith College, Ireland's largest private, third level college seeks to recruit a motivated, skilled and experienced Learning Technologist, initially on a half-time contract, with excellent future prospects.

This role is an exciting opportunity for an eLearning specialist to join our award-winning, Digital Learning Department (DLD) working across all four campuses, with a small, very dedicated team. The successful candidate will gain exposure to a wide range of eLearning tools and platforms, supporting online and blended learning activity on many and varied programmes. Reporting to the Learning Technologist Manager (Head of DLD) they will have individual responsibility for developing high quality training guides and helping develop digital content across multiple disciplines. Working to maximise student-centred learning and engagement, liaising with programme teams and supporting all Griffith academic staff, this challenging role involves roll-out of emergent technologies in various modes, from our high-quality classroom delivery, to blended and online programmes.

Job Responsibilities:

- Create training materials, videos and eLearning solutions as required
- Advise on digital learning, interactive tools, activities and software
- Support stakeholders, staff and students as appropriate from induction to everyday support
- Train staff in video editing and voice over recording using our campus eLearning labs
- Contribute to the development of the College's teaching, learning and Assessment strategy, while working with the Learning Technologist Manager
- Work with Programme Directors and Lecturers to ensure that online and blended course development is closely integrated with all facets of academic programmes
- Promote use of innovative teaching methodology, keeping across sectoral developments
- Develop innovative approaches to teaching and learning online e.g. use of ePortfolios
- Work with the lecturers to ensure that our VLE (Moodle) is optimised to promote student engagement e.g. use of learning analytics for learner success
- Contribute to the planning and development of new programmes and the roll-out of digital modes of delivery on existing programmes, while being mindful of GDPR compliance

Any other duties that may be assigned by your line manager from time to time. These job responsibilities are not to be regarded as exclusive or exhaustive. They are intended as an outline/indication of the areas of activity and will be amended in the light of the changing environment within the Department, the College and the Higher Education sector.

Experience and Qualifications Required:

- Relevant degree or qualifications in Learning Technology/design or a related field desirable
- Strong technical experience with instructional design and related tools is essential
- Ability to work independently with minimal supervision
- Experience with Learning Management systems e.g. Moodle or similar
- Excellent problem-solving, customer centric, analytical skills and good communication skills
- Ability to work with campus based, virtual and diverse teams.

Please note:

It is envisaged interviews for this position will take place over Zoom and candidates invited to interview will be asked to prepare a short presentation illustrating their approach to the use of emergent learning technology and their practice in facilitating quality training and education.
